Prominent Points In the Ever Widening Sphere of Woman

A curious thing happened recently. Under the "hypnotic" spell which comes from a long course of novel reading and a lack of useful and steady employment a girl married hastily a man whom she did not know well. Her family advised against the match, but, as usual, this rather hurried it on. The young woman, after a few months of matrimony, found that novels are not what they seem. Her husband was exactly the opposite of the fiction heroes she had adored. The husband who had seemed a hero became to her a brute and monster. He really treated her very badly, but kept "tab" on her so she could not get away from him. The law declared she was his property, body and bones. At length, in desperation, she ran away and returned to her family while the husband was absent from home. Her family made her welcome, especially two stalwart brothers. A continent now separated her from the ex-husband, but no sooner had he returned to his dismantled home than he leaped off his foot after the wife who had found his society so undesirable. He drove in a carriage to the door of the lady's brother's home and "demanded"—demanded, mind you—that his wife should be turned over to him like a piece of luggage. For answer the big brothers handcuffed the assumed owner of that woman and took him to the police station. Now, here is the question: here are two questions: Has a man the right to break into his wife's presence whenever and wherever he pleases, whether she wants him or not? Does a wife, simply because she is a wife, lose that sacred right of privacy which belongs alike to all human beings?

When the race is truly civilized, disease and decrepitude will be wiped out. The glad years will come and go and leave no trace upon men and women except that they will become always wiser, stronger, more loving.

One effect of the continually advancing price of meat, poultry and even of eggs since the formation of the hen trust will be to drive housekeepers back upon fruit, nuts and vegetables. They will learn how many delicious and nutritious food preparations can be made without either eggs or meat. Take the single article of the banana. One can buy in the large cities excellent bananas for a cent apiece. They can be sliced with pineapple pulp and eaten raw for dessert, and they can be baked or fried. There is also now a banana flour made, which is useful and most palatable in various dishes. Americans are a nation of excessive meat eaters. If the high price of animal flesh shall turn them from necessity to a less heating diet and one more agreeable to the imagination, then it will be a blessing not at all disguised.

One of the most successful railroad contractors and constructors in the country is Mrs. Theodora Beacham, at present working on a road in Virginia. The railway company not long ago sent Mrs. Beacham a check for $15,000 for services performed to date. Once more, why not?

Do you know how to sign and indorse a check? So many women don't.

An enlarging field for women who can write grammatically and entertainingly is found among the advertising and trade papers. Mrs. Ada Crisp of New York is the editor of an interesting and attractive magazine giving news of the grocery and delicatessen trade. Miss Carmelita Beckwith has been for some years in sole charge of the advertising department of a leading gas and electric company in New York. She issues a handsome monthly bulletin for the company. In the same city Miss Florence Levy successfully established and conducts a periodical devoted to art matters. Many others might be named.

The king of Siam has six grown daughters, and they dress in a handsome uniform of white blouse, black knickerbockers, black stockings and buckled shoes. They are graceful and beautifully formed and look very attractive, with their dark hair and sparkling eyes. Their mother, the queen, dresses in the same way as the girls do. Their attire is the national garb of the Siamese women.

Miss Tremere, eighteen years old, is a girl who, with her mother, conducts a grocery in a certain big city. Not long ago she was robbed of several hundred dollars in property and money. The police were notified. They were supposed to have put their most foxy sleuths on the thief's track. These gentlemen did nothing. The prospect was the girl would never get any of her property back. She determined to hunt the thief herself. She evolved a plan which, perhaps because of its very simplicity, was overlooked by the astute masculine sleuths. She patiently watched and waited and at length ran the thief to cover and got back her money and jewels. Women everywhere are proving that they can attend to their affairs better than anybody else can do for them.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY.

Gay and Brilliant Seasons at the National Capital.

Almost every American girl looks longingly forward to spending a winter in Washington. Her imagination paints its balls, its dinners, receptions and afternoon teas as scenes of enchantment in which she hopes sooner or later to appear.

The American girl's imagination does not lead her wrong. In no capital of Europe is the best social circle so democratic, therefore so attractive, as that of Washington.

Mrs. Roosevelt and her aids as well as certain ladies of the diplomatic corps are interested in giving a dignified, somewhat conventional tone to Washington society. On the other hand, however, there is a dashing young set that wishes society to be gay and jolly, dignity or no dignity. Thus far probably the lively young set has the best of it, especially as one of its leaders is Alice, Mrs. Roosevelt's own stepdaughter.

Miss Alice Roosevelt.

but in the White House. Alice Roosevelt has her father's facile way of skipping from place to place. If he can attend two dinners and make three speeches in one evening, in like manner can Miss Alice go to three parties in one evening and then take a train for New York or California or the end of the earth.

She has a will as strong as her father's and is original in thought and action. A sufficient income, which she inherited in her own right, enables her to do in a great measure as she pleases. Being so like her father in will and courage, she naturally is little afraid of his "big stick."

On both sides of the Atlantic match-makers have been busy themselves for two or three years to find a husband for Miss Roosevelt. Last summer during her visit to the St. Louis exposition Hon. Nicholas Longworth, the gallant bachelor member of congress from Cincinnati, made things specially pleasant for her by his courteous attentions, and at once there was forecast a wedding—which did not come off. Paris gossips have amused themselves by selecting for her any one of a dozen royal princes. But probably the president's spirited daughter will settle the matter for herself.

Mrs. Charles Warren Fairbanks.

A more important personage than ever in Washington society is Mrs. Fairbanks, wife of the vice president. She is more highly and solidly educated than almost any other woman in the capital's social circle. She is a college graduate and also studied law with her husband, in due time receiving a diploma as bachelor of laws. She has had a course in international and parliamentary law, the latter fitting her especially to fill the post of president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, to which she was elected. When her children, four sons and a daughter, were little, she studied medicine that she might know better how to take care of them.

Vice President and Mrs. Fairbanks will continue to live in the house they occupied when Mr. Fairbanks was senator from Indiana. It is adapted to large entertainments, and that commends it to Mrs. Fairbanks, one of the most hospitable hostesses of Washington. In the selection of her guests she is entirely independent, governed by no official precedent.

Young Members of Society.

Seldom has the national capital's social set contained so many beautiful and accomplished girls as have graced it the past two seasons. Two of the latest comers are Miss Pauline Morton, daughter of the secretary of the navy, and Miss Katherine Elkins, daughter of Senator Elkins of West Virginia. Both these young ladies have mothers who, if possible, are even handsomer than their daughters. Miss Elkins is devoted to outdoor life and to horses, having three hunters of her own that nobody but herself ever rides. Many of the Washington society girls are of the athletic type.

Among scores of charming young American ladies in the capital set may be named the Misses McKenna, daughters of Justice McKenna; Miss Converse, Miss Mathilde Townsend and Miss Warren.

Mothers Are Helped

THEIR HEALTH RESTORED

Happiness of Thousands of Homes Due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's Advice.

A devoted mother seems to listen to every call of duty excepting the supreme one that tells her to guard her health, and before she realizes it some derangement of the female organs has manifested itself, and nervousness and irritability take the place of happiness and amiability.

Tired, nervous and irritable, the mother is unfit to care for her children, and her condition ruins the child's disposition and reacts upon herself.

The mother should not be blamed, as she no doubt is suffering with backache, headache, bearing-down pains or displacement, making life a burden. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the unfailing cure for this condition. It strengthens the female organs and permanently cures all displacements and irregularities.

Such testimony as the following should convince women of its value:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham: "I want to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. I suffered for eight years with ovarian troubles. I was nervous, tired and irritable, and it did not seem as though I could stand it any longer, as I had five children to care for. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended and it has entirely cured me. I cannot thank you enough for your letter of advice and for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me.—Mrs. Ph. Hoffman, 100 Hiram Street, Brooklyn, N. Y."

Mrs. Pinkham advises sick women free. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Dr. J. W. Morrow of Burlington, who has been in jail since his arrest, September 6, in the $50,000 suit brought against him for alleged malpractice, causing the death of Mrs. Ida Kimball of New York, has secured bail and been released. C. W. Brownell becoming his bondsman. When Doctor Morrow was first arrested bail in the sum of $50,000 was demanded and no reduction would be accepted. A petition to have the bail reduced was placed before Judge H. H. Wheeler at Brattleboro and, after a hearing, the bail was reduced to $10,000.

An Enthusiastic Letter.

The following abridged letter from a recent issue of the Oneonta (N. Y.) Star will appeal to people who have sojourned in this section and visited at Bread Loaf and Lake Dunmore:

"The following letter, descriptive of Lake Dunmore and Lake Dunmore house, in Vermont, written by S. H. Potter when sojourning there to his family here, although not intended for publication, will interest many Star readers, especially the friends of H. E. Bissell, formerly of Cooperstown, and Herman Mendel, who has been spending the summer there.

Lake Dunmore, a sparkling gem of crystal water surrounded by a beautiful setting of emerald mountains, lies about 20 miles from Rutland in a most beautiful and picturesque part of the state of Vermont. The Green mountains, with ranges broken here and there by peaks higher than others, affords a charming scene in any direction one may chance to look.

A most interesting sight it is to locate, on a clear day, a peak here or an eminence there far over and beyond the immediate range of mountains which seems to enclose you.

But through the openings or depressions it is, I believe, not difficult to locate points forty to fifty miles away. It has been the good fortune of many a traveler to find this hotel situated so beautifully, and so ably conducted by H. E. Bissell, formerly of the Fenimore, at Cooperstown, N. Y., and now manager of the Dunmore house and the celebrated Brandon inn at Brandon, Vt.

An exceptionally pleasant mountain climb is to the summit of Sunset hill, which rises, perhaps, four or five hundred feet and, with its eastern base, almost at the door of the hotel. From the top of this mountain a fine view is obtained of the surrounding country and far away over and beyond Lake Champlain and into the Adirondacks.

I suppose the reason this mountain obtained such an appropriate name is because it completely shuts off the beauties of the setting sun from the hotel and unless you climb to the top you can not appreciate the glory of a Lake Dunmore sunset in the mountains. It is said that to see the sunrise from the summit of Mount Washington is a most ardently sought for experience and one day to be remembered, and I can say also, with much emphasis and truth, that to see the harvest moon rise in the very heart of the Green mountains is a sight long to be remembered also. We had this pleasure one beautiful, clear evening and it was indeed an unusually glorious sight.

It would perhaps be impossible to enumerate all the points of interest about here, but probably the one to Bread Loaf Inn is the one affording the greatest pleasure and within a reasonable distance of only nine miles. Here is one of the quaintest hotels, as well as one of the quietest resting spots, on earth.

One might say above the earth—the altitude is so high and the air so pure—yet you are still on good solid rock or granite foundation, and the state of Vermont all around you. I might describe many other points of interest about here but of course you know I am not writing history but only a sketch of my impressions and I am sure many will, concur with me in at least some of them."

A LAXATIVE COUGH SYRUP.

"A cold or cough nearly always produces constipation—the water all runs to the eyes, nose and throat instead of passing out of the system through the liver and kidneys. For the want of moisture the bowels become dry and hard." Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar is the original Laxative Cough Syrup. It meets and corrects the above conditions by acting as a pleasant cathartic on the bowels—expels all colds from the system and cures all coughs, croup, whooping cough, hiccups, bronchitis, etc. Sold by Bart's Drug Store, Middlebury; South Side Drug Store, Bristol.

An unique spectacle was afforded on the Billings estate at Woodstock a few days ago, when a 52-acre field of corn was cut and bound in one day by two four-horse teams and harvesting machines.

Vermont Evidence

One Line from Vermont is Worth a Column of Foreign Testimony.

Make a mental note of this. The endorser are well known in Vermont. Their veracity is unquestioned. They are the largest Granite dealers in the world. You are reading Vermont evidence. Investigating home testimony. Vermont news for Vermont people. It is not from Florida or Ohio. Such a piece can't lurk around honesty, its prominent characteristic. Home endorsement, its salient point.

STRONG HARDWARE CO. Gentl—Several years ago we covered part of our buildings with Lincoln Roofing and part with another roofing that was said to be "just as good." After giving them a fair trial and after having used several other roofings, we send you an order for 300 squares of roofing to use on our new buildings this year. This ought to be a good endorsement.
